Oro Valley's first-ever mural was just painted on the north side of the Oro Valley Aquatic Center at James D. Kriegh Park. Artist Ashley White's "Dream it, then do it" concept was inspired by one of Oro Valley's founding fathers, James D. Kriegh, whose dream was to create a community that controlled its own destiny. When you visit the mural in person, look closely at the background to see the dreams of more than 80 community members of all ages who submitted their dreams to the artist for inclusion in this project. This mural was a partnership between the Town, SAACA, the Oro Valley Chamber, and Visit Tucson.

Water Utility to launch new customer portal in January

The Town of Oro Valley Water Utility is excited to announce the implementation of a new and improved online customer portal that will make account payments and management easier than ever before! The self-service portal will allow customers to set up convenient payment methods, update contact information and access historical billing statements. The new system also means your bill will have a new look. The Water Utility is planning to launch the new customer portal in January, so keep an eye on your upcoming Water Utility bills and on the Town's website for complete details, including helpful information on how to set up your new account.

Bond financing for Parks and Recreation

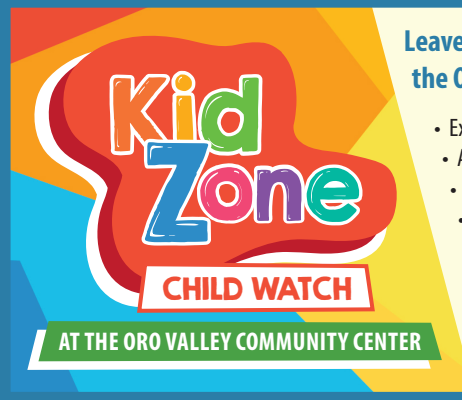

Oro Valley Town Council recently voted to approve $25 million in bond financing for various Parks and Recreation improvements. This is not a voter-approved bond that adds property taxes to cover the repayment. Rather, the cost for repayment of these bonds is included in the sales taxes the Town already collects. More than half of the $25 million will be used to add amenities in Naranja Park, which were identified by the community in the recent parks master planning process. The remaining funds will be directed to other Parks and Recreation needs such as: tennis court rehabilitation, golf course irrigation systems, reconfiguring the Community Center parking lot, and improvements to the Town's multi-use path system. Have you heard the latest episode of the Town's podcast, This is Oro Valley?
